

ana m. sai

portfolio

biography

ana marinkovic-sai (b. Serbia, 1997) is a multidisciplinary artist and researcher working at the intersection of contemporary art, feminist theory and emerging technologies. a prodigious talent, she was admitted to the Faculty of Fine Arts in Belgrade at just 16 years old, where she earned both her BFA and MA in Sculpture. currently, she is pursuing her PhD at the Faculty of Media and Communications, specializing in transdisciplinary studies of art and media theory.

her theoretical research examines the evolving role of the artist within today's art hierarchies, a theme that also anchors her artistic practice. with a particular focus on feminist critiques of technology, she investigates how AI and other digital innovations reshape the landscape of fine art.

ana's artistic work playfully navigates elite societal structures, identity performance and the politics of the art world. Her practice spans space installations, drawings and video, often blurring the lines between critique and immersion. Between 2019 and 2022, she lived and worked in New York City, where she further developed her conceptual approach. her work has been featured in exhibitions across Serbia highlighting a group show held in MOCAB and Europe (Croatia, Belgium, Netherlands, Berlin), establishing her as a compelling voice in contemporary art discourse.

manifesto

every artwork is a battle between who I was taught to be and what I need to say.

my work begins where words fail me, in the silent spaces between theory and lived experience. through drawings that capture fleeting intimacies, installations that transform personal artifacts into monuments and videos that dissolve the boundary between performance and self-exposure, I map the unstable terrain of identity.

this practice is an ongoing trial- with the art world's unspoken rules, with my own shifting self, with the vulnerability of putting private truths on public display.

works
works
works
works

new wave art slut

new wave art slut operates as a critical reappropriation of Night Flight's New Wave Video Slut, transposing its subversive televisual aesthetics into a trenchant meta-commentary on contemporary art's institutionalized transgressions.

through its manifesto-like presentation of eight satirical commandments, the work interrogates the paradoxical nature of artistic identity construction - where radical posturing and market assimilation exist in uneasy symbiosis.

written by: lara pan

new wave art slut

rules:

1. NARCISSISM- ALWAYS
2. DATE SMART (LOVE IS TEMPORARY, INSTITUTIONAL ACCESS IS FOREVER)
3. MAKE IT UNTITLED

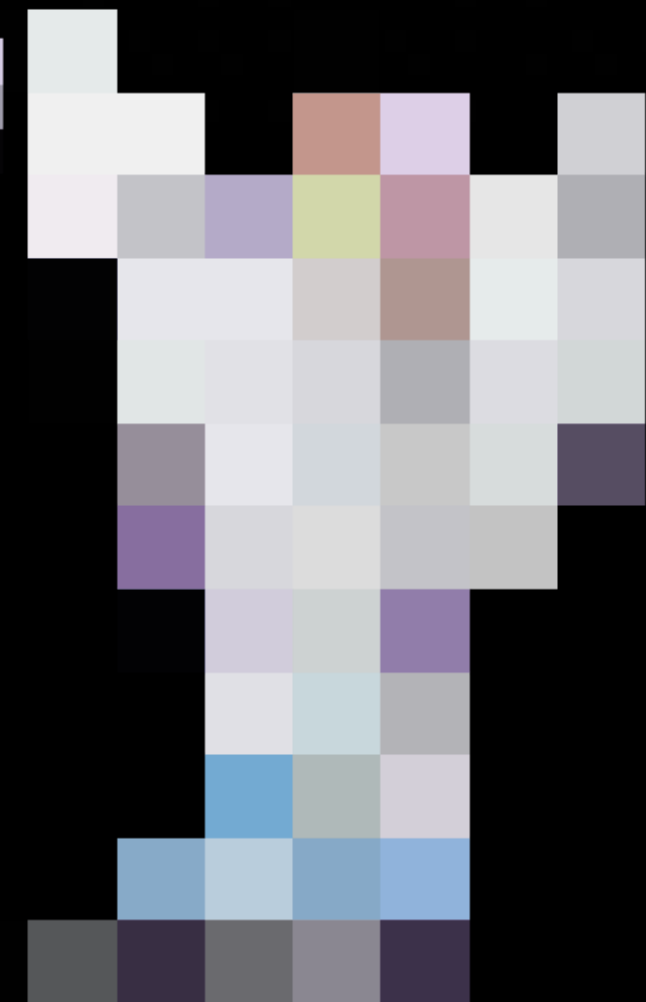

4. BE UNAVAILABLE BUT EVERYWHERE
5. INSTAGRAM IS YOUR WHITE CUBE
6. NAME DROP
7. GASLIGHT GATEKEEP GUGGENHEIM
8. SPEAK IN HYPER-THEORY, NEVER IN FACTS

cyber-fairy land

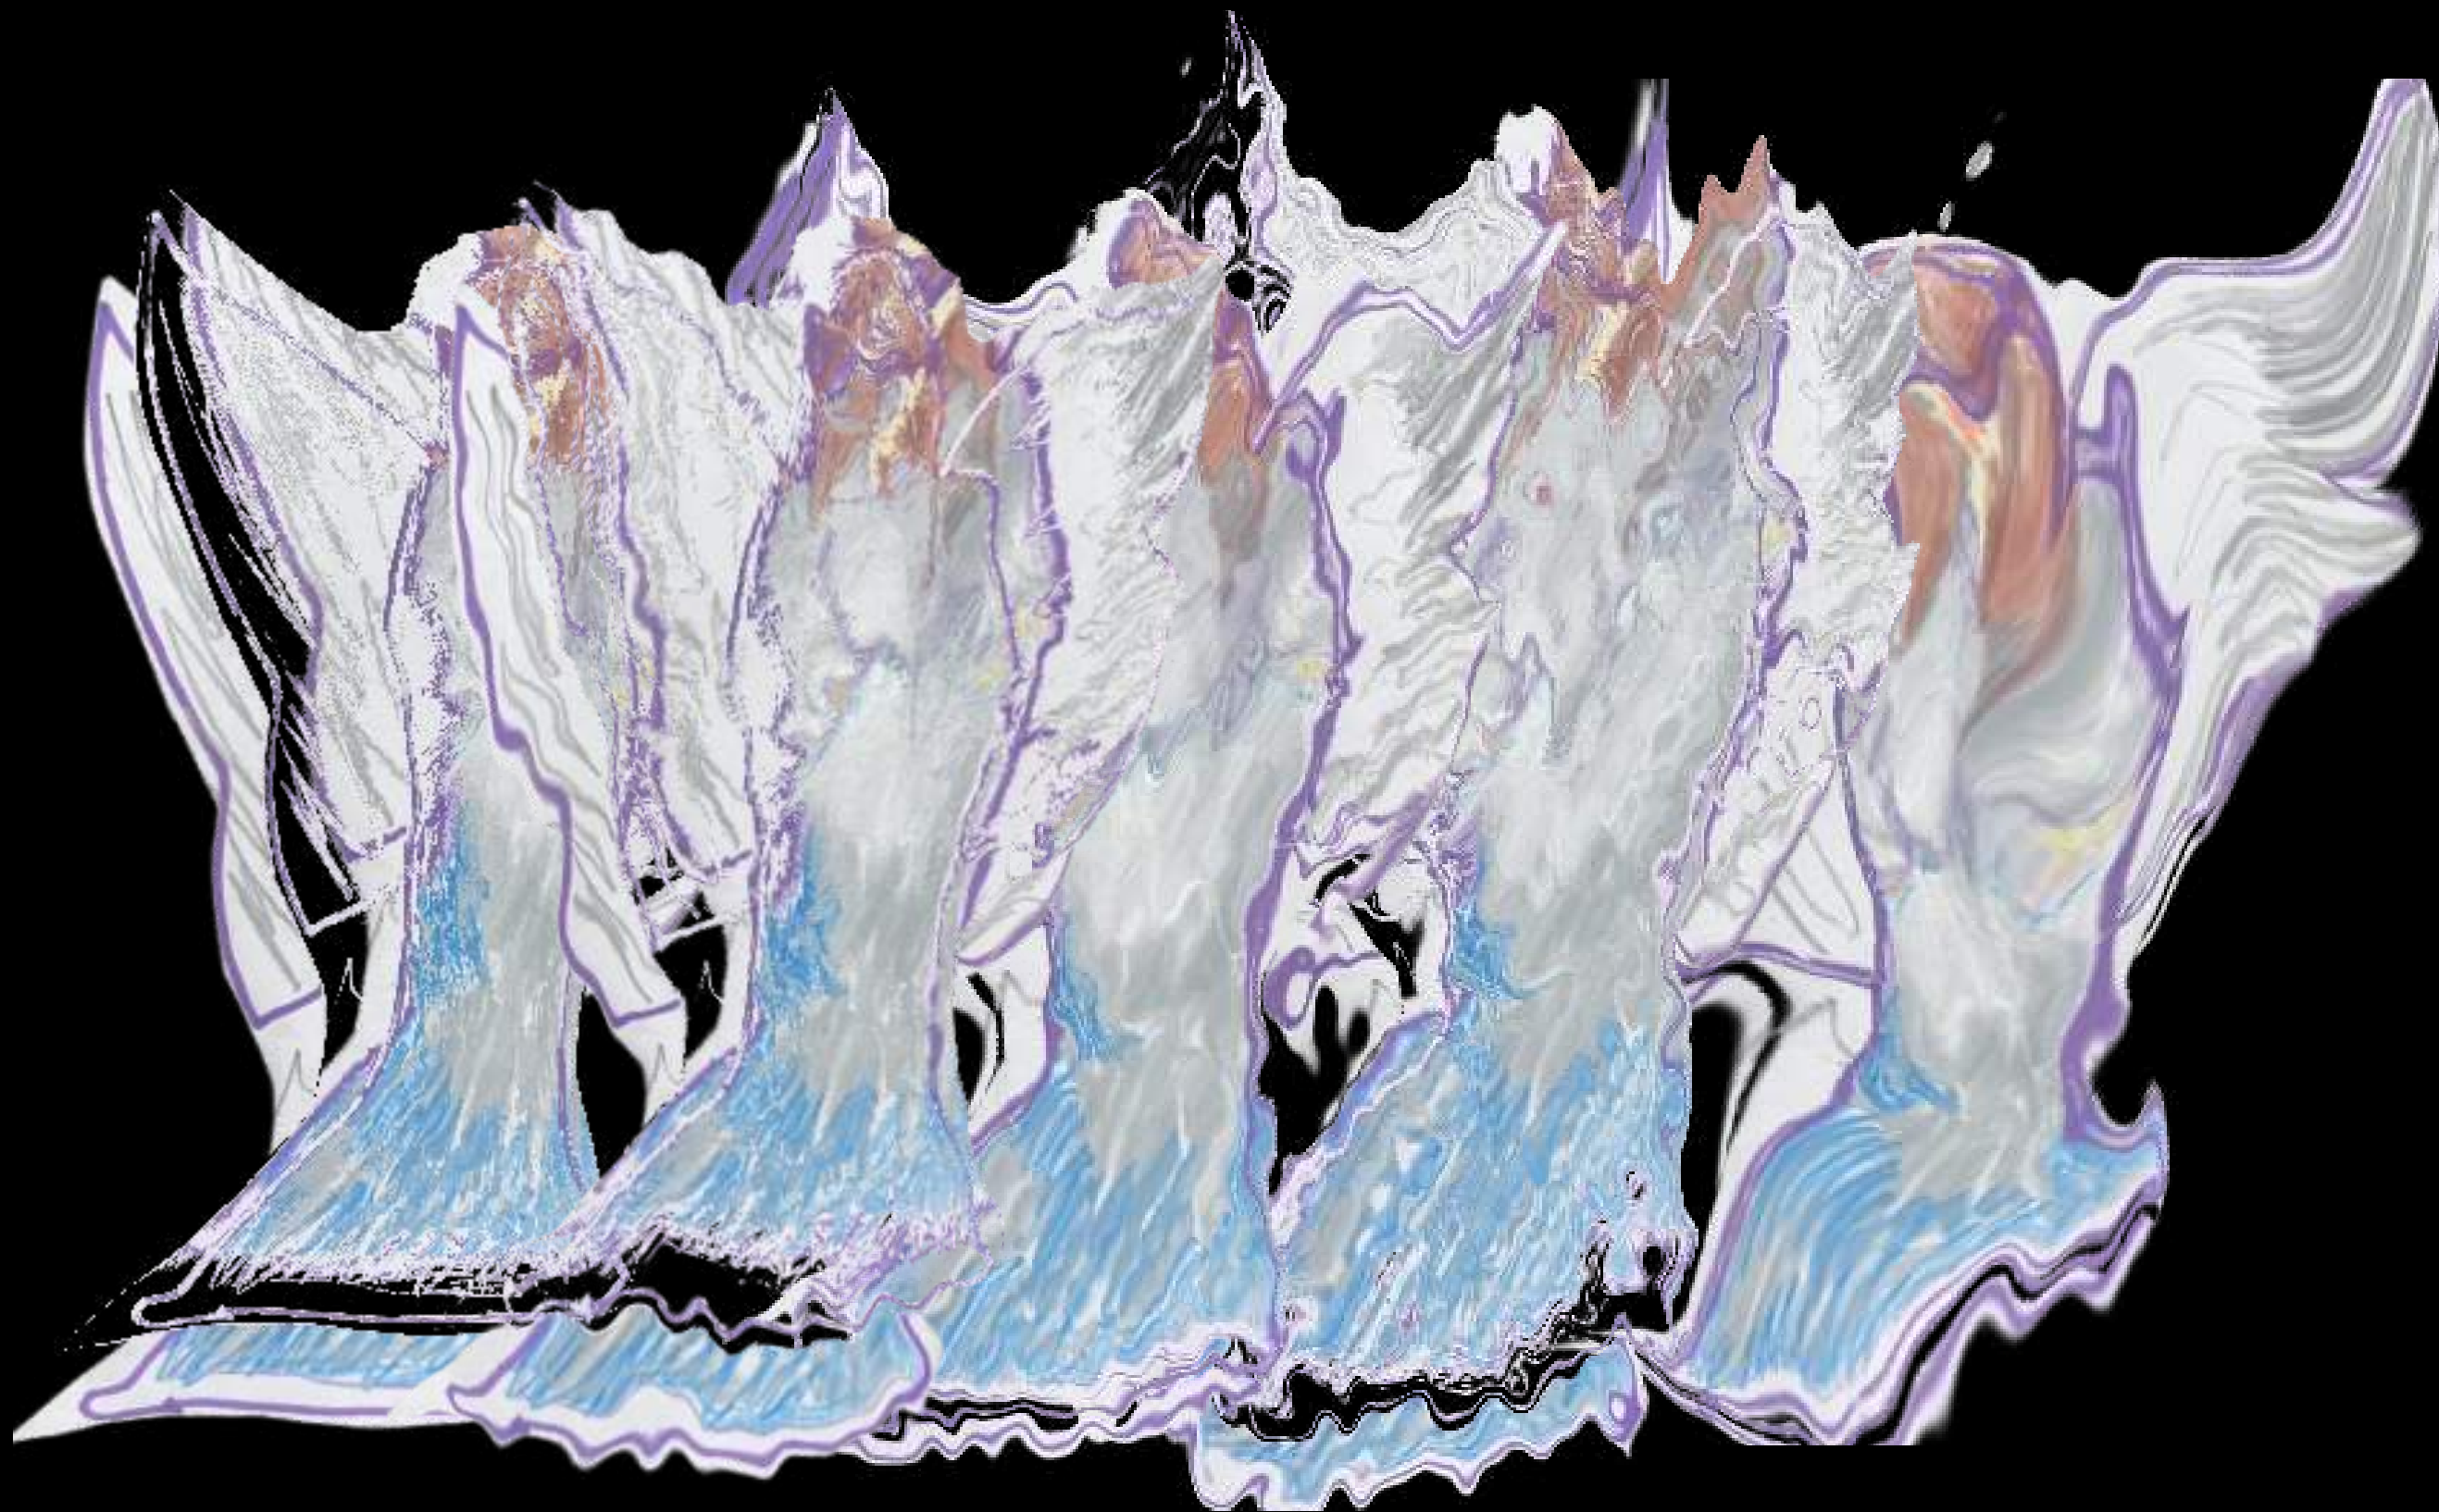

cyber-fairy land is a corrupted manifesto of selfhood. The cyber-fairy—once a therapeutic emblem, a digital rebirth—now undergoes data decay, her edges unraveling into the noise of transformation.

stretched, pixelated, and printed on glass, she becomes an unstable artifact, her edges bleeding into abstraction. the medium itself acts as a digital skin, reflecting and warping the viewer's gaze, as if trapped in a loop between resolution and erasure. this is identity in the age of the glitch: fragile yet resilient, human yet hybrid, where every distortion whispers a new iteration of becoming.

written by: kristina armus

cyber-fairy land

cyber-fairy land

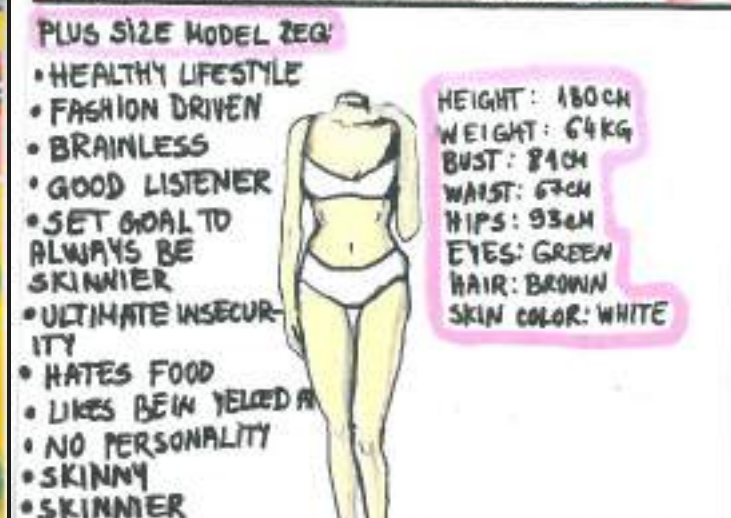

escaping reality

escaping reality

all my fake carriers

simple life

simple life is a durational environment that materializes the psychological and corporeal tensions of displacement. Within an oppressive darkness, a single mattress—its surface inscribed with the faint, recursive declaration "I'm not cold"—functions as both witness and site of endurance. The accompanying sonic element, a murmured refrain, oscillates between affirmation and somatic dissociation, complicating the body's relationship to its own precarity.

the infestation of roaches across a traditional Slavic blanket introduces an entropic counterpoint: at once a metaphor for resilience and an indictment of systemic neglect. their ceaseless movement undermines any romanticization of survival, while the blanket itself is an artifact of cultural memory becomes a contested site of belonging. the work does not document struggle so much as metabolize it, demanding the viewer's complicit engagement with the thresholds of discomfort and dignity.

written by: zлата vucetic

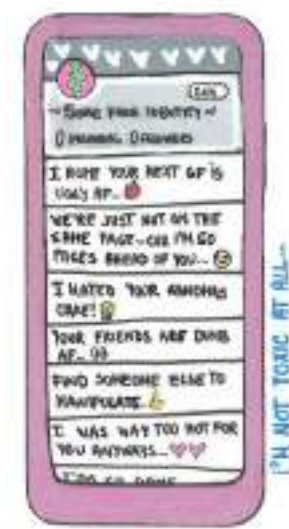

switch off your phone/ waw project

the series of drawings turn off your phone represent the individual through the prism of a mobile phone as a medium that contains a large amount of personal and intimate information about a person. the post-digital era has transformed us into beings who largely depend on the use of smart devices, and thus these devices become the extensions of our bodies (reference Marshall McLuhan).

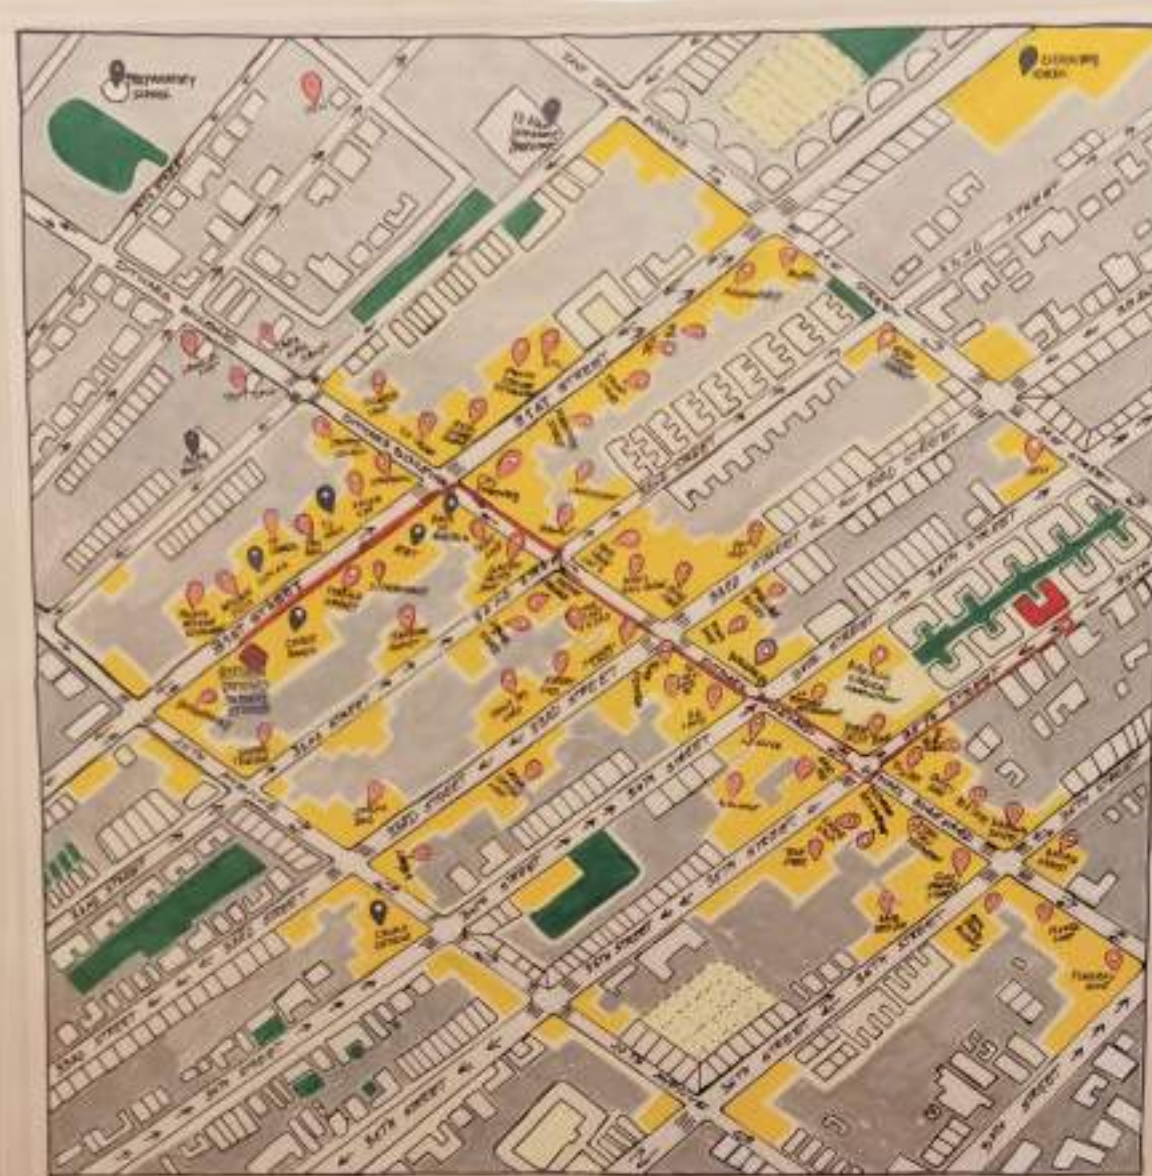

the series of drawings show content from the artist's mobile phone, where the idea is stepping out of the comfort zone and give a glimpse of personal and intimate information that is not usually shared to the audience. drawings primarily problematize interpersonal emotional relationships and the superficiality of these relationships the second layer of these drawings represent the problem of perceiving the female body, especially in modern media practices, as well as self-awareness of given problems which we do not always solve in an adequate way. the third layer of this process would be the rational and irrational thoughts that go through our heads when using smart devices where we try to make a difference between the real and the digital, although that difference as time goes by is increasingly lost.

written by: biljana jokic

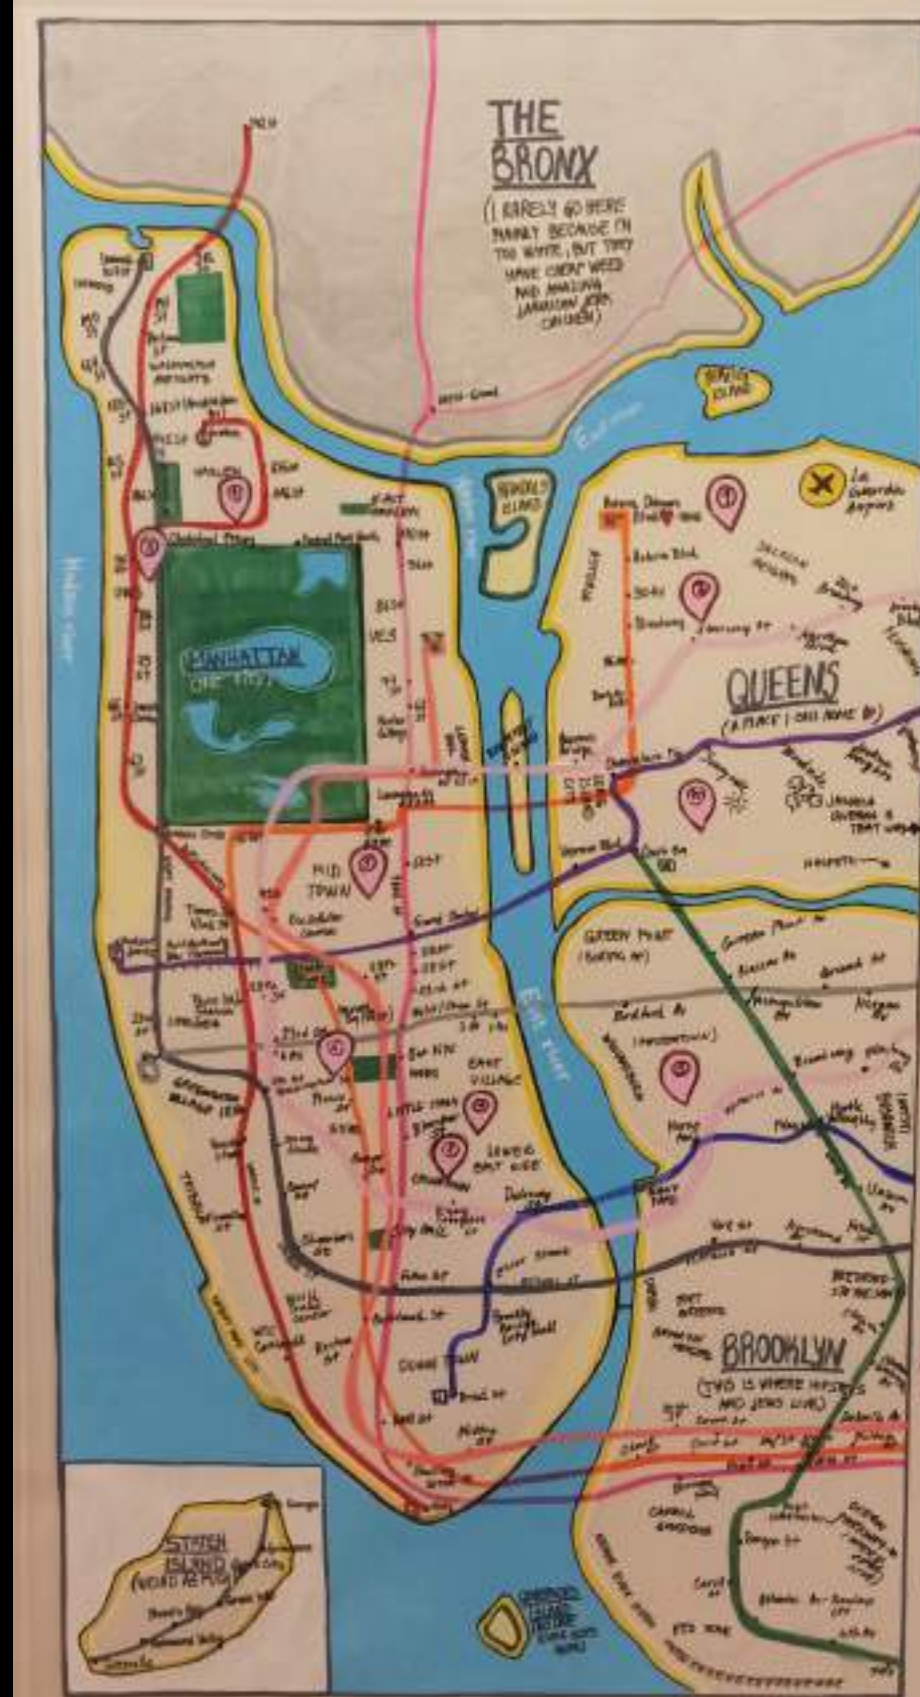

switch off your phone/ waw project

survival maps

A WAY FROM HOME TO SUBWAY STATION ASTORIA
 SPECIAL ROUTE TO AVOID RATS, FOLLOW RED LINE
 ⚠️ BEWARE OF RESTAURANTS—THEY LOVE IT (ESPECIALLY BURGEROLOGY)
 ⚠️ TRASH PILES ⚠️ IT'S THEIR HOME AND THEY DON'T LIKE HAVING GUESTS OVER

- ① ASTORIA DITMARS
double shot latte at O.H.
Café in the hood
- ② STEINWAY ST
breakfast at Astoria
Gourmet Café
- ③ 86TH ST
pick up check at Citi & Wind
$$$
- ④ 16TH ST
buy some cheap weed in Hudson in front of smoke shop
- ⑤ 5TH AV & 59TH ST
have a drink at
"Employee's only"
- ⑥ 4TH STREET
gift at Washington
Square park
- ⑦ GRAND ST
have some pasta and
cheese in Little Italy
- ⑧ CANAL STREET
shopping in Chinatown
because I'm a bitch on a budget
- ⑨ BEDFORD AV.
see a show in Williamsburg
and buy overpriced craft
beer
- ⑩ 46TH ST
get weed on my phone at
"the hunk" - sorry wife
in order I'll be home because I'm too stinky to take the sub.

A DAY IN
THE CITY

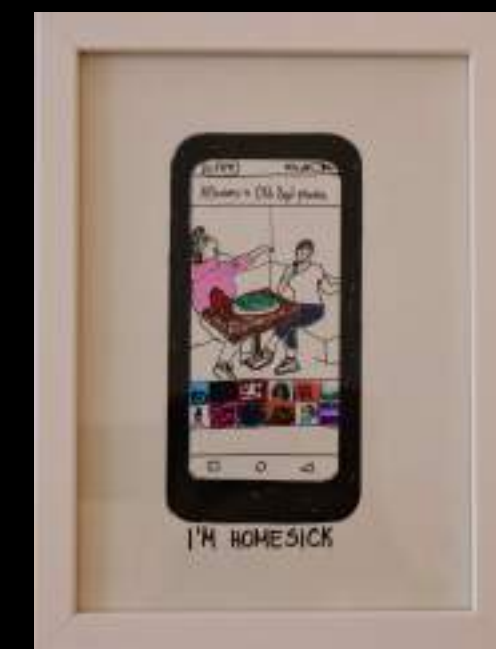

A WAY FROM HOME TO SUBWAY STATION
SPECIAL ROUTE TO AVOID RATS, FOLLOW BEWARE OF RESTAURANTS-THEY LOVE IT (E TRASH PILES IT'S THEIR HOME AND T

a way back home

the artist records the flow of her thoughts and emotional turmoil through a virtual diary on the screen of a mobile phone, the only connection with the world that she left in search of something better.

nudes/ object of desire/ wishlist

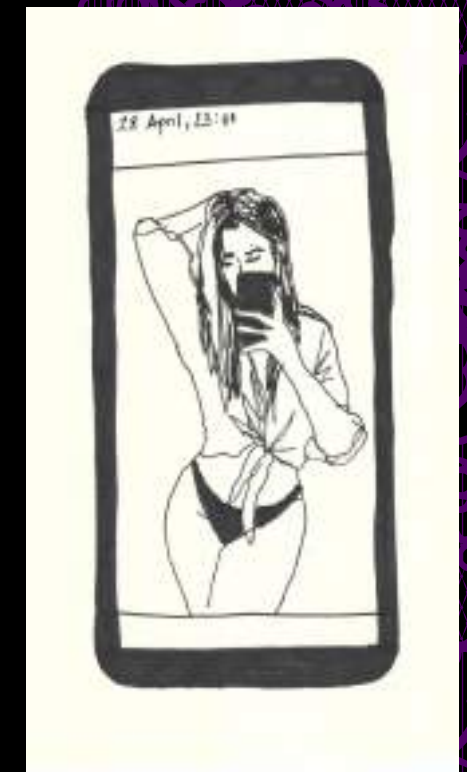

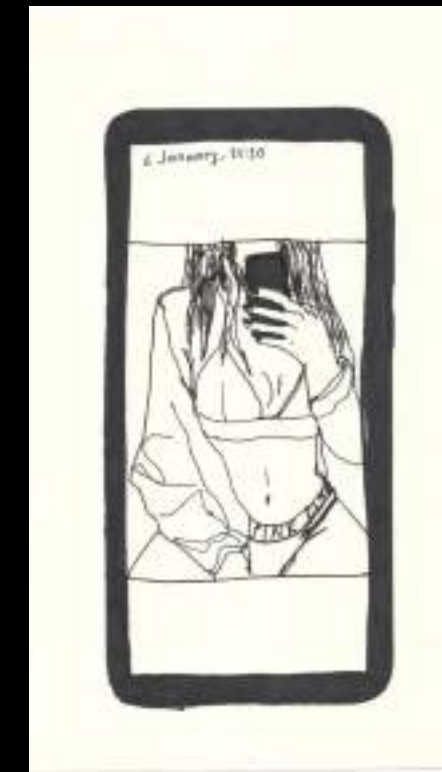

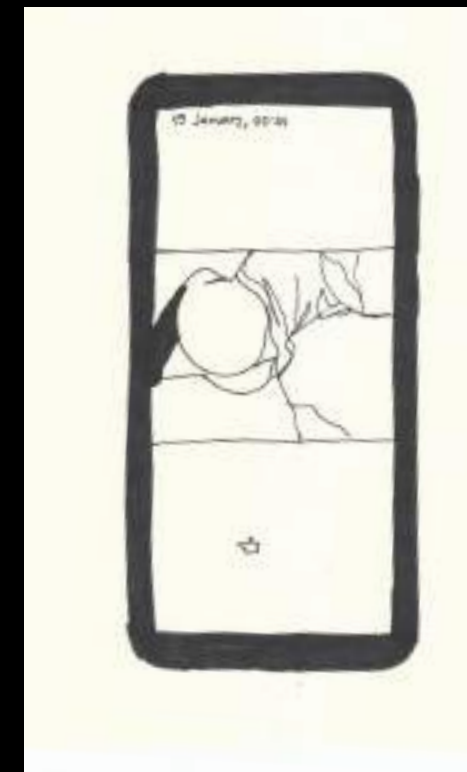

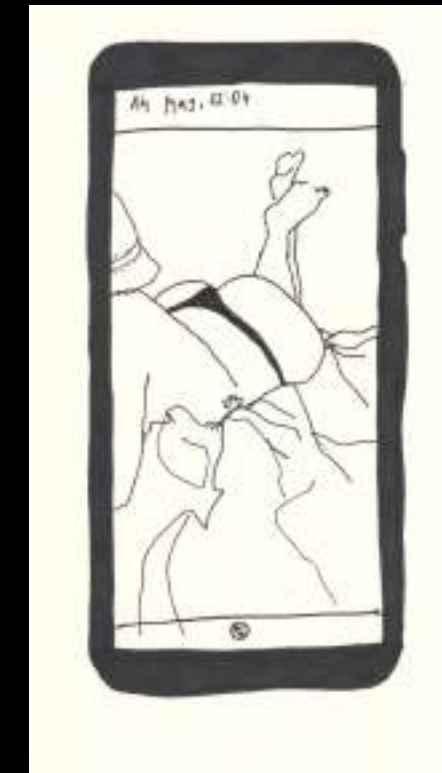

through a provocative blend of visual art and social commentary, the artist invites you to reflect on the superficial allure of branded objects and the deeper significance of artistic expression.

in the series of works titled wishlistshlist, you'll find luxury items such as branded bags, shoes, and clothes, meticulously crafted from materials that are easily destructible. by doing so, the artist aims to trivialize the perceived worth of these luxury goods, questioning their true value in comparison to the intrinsic worth of art. the fragility of these objects highlights the transient nature of material desire and encourages a reevaluation of what we truly value.

complementing these works is a series of drawings depicting smartphone screens displaying nude photographs. these images serve as a metaphor for the vulnerability and exposure inherent in the artistic process. the artist believes that creating art is a promiscuous act, as it involves sharing intimate parts of oneself with the world. by using her own body, a woman's body, she adds layers of meaning, inviting discussions on gender, self-exposure, and the multifaceted nature of desire.

nudes/ object of desire/ wishlist

nudes/ object of desire/ wishlist

draped in provocative clothes, katarina alfa jovanivich and ana m.-sai transformed into living still lifes- luxurious, sexualized, and eerily still. surrounded by glossy shopping bags, (paper-mache) their performance exaggerated the female body as a consumable object, playing with the dangerous glamour of fashion's promise: look, want, become. who is the subject here, and who is the thing? a sharp, seductive parody of the male gaze and the myth of the "it girl": posed, packaged, and endlessly desirable.

OBJECT OF
DESIRE

